n adventure begins in a single step..... or a roll. Martha and I were walking to work when I heard very fast flapping.

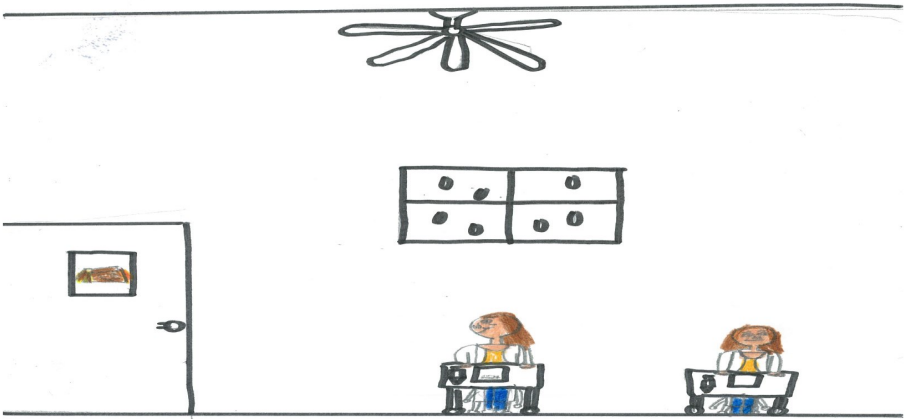

“Did you hear that?”

“Here what?”

“Never mind,” I replied.

“NO!” Martha yelled.

“It sounded like flapping from....”

Martha rudely interrupted, “We’ll be late!”

She grabbed me by the arm and we bolted for the hospital. “Come on” she said “We’ve got our medical exam today.”

“Is it today? I thought it was tomorrow.”

As we were in the middle of our exam, the flapping noise was back. It caught my eye. I have never seen anything like it.

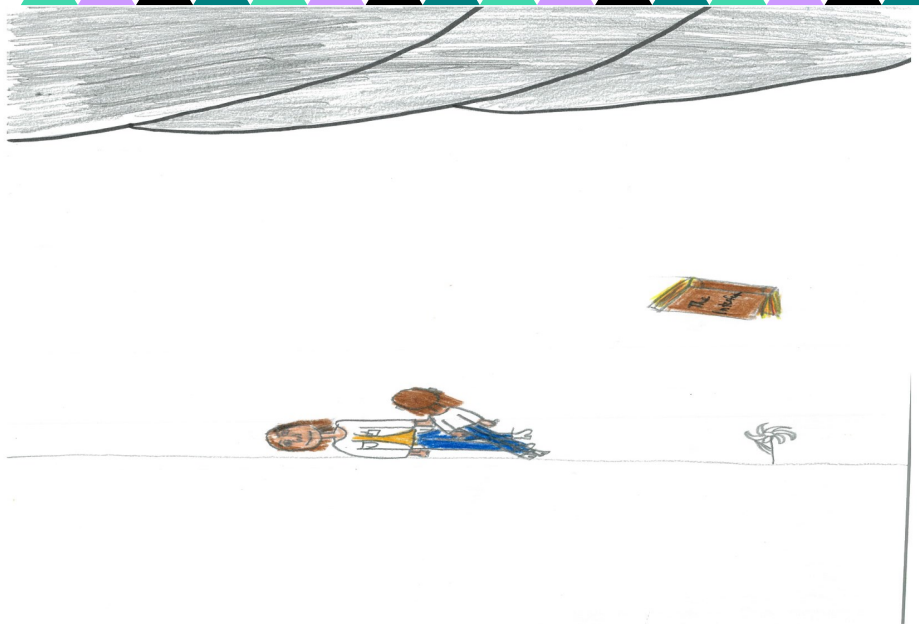

It was a glowing, flying magic book.

“Martha, Martha.” I whispered. “Look, it’s that thing I saw earlier.”

“That’s not possible it’s, it’s...”

And with that, we jumped out of our seats like kangaroos and chased after the book.

The thing lead us to a door that said ‘Danger do not enter’. “Come on, we need to get back to our exam.”

She suggested, “They are probably looking for you, well me, well us.”

I walked towards the door.

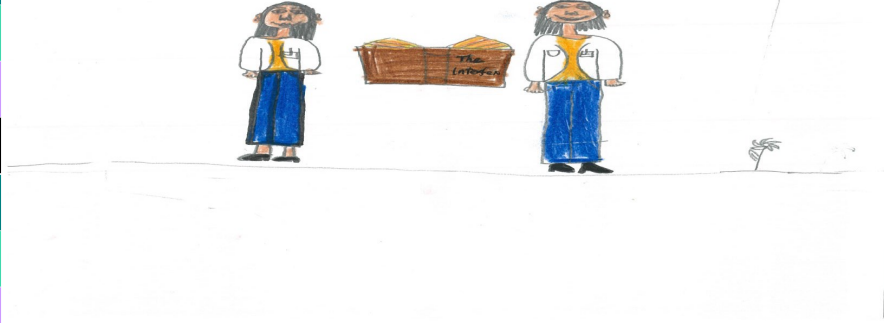

“Wait” but it was too late.

We were already rolling into the door.

Three hours passed, I opened my eyes to see nothing but white. Martha was on top of me.

I tried to roll her off me but she was too heavy.

Then Martha’s eye lids rose.

“Was it a dream?” Martha asked half asleep.

“You know you are as heavy as an elephant” I told her.

“No, I am not!” she shouted “By the way, where are we?”

Walking around we tried to find a door or something or ANYTHING.

Just then, that strange book appeared.

It said on the cover 'The Interfex'.

"Hey Martha," I shouted.

"Yeah," she replied.

"I found that weird book thing," I said.

"Open it," Martha suggested.

"What if I open it and a dragon comes out?"

"Dragons aren't real."

"You know that is the same thing we thought about flying books, don't kill my dream."

Then I opened the book. It looked like a map on the first page.

“We.....are at the border of the magic realm.” Martha stood up and ran into the wall and hit her head. Hard. I think she was trying to wake herself up. Time passed and the more we stay here the more deadly it became.

Martha opened her eyes the only thing I could say was, 'Did that hurt?'

She looked at me and said, “What do you think?”

Then a small crack opened in the wall.

“Come on, it could be a way out.”

“Miss Jones, Miss Cruz, I am trying to show the new doctors around. Please leave.”

As Martha and I walked out of the hospital, Martha said, “All these years trying to be Doctors and now we have lost our chance. “

“Don’t worry we had an adventure of a life time.”

“If you say so.”

“Now what?”

An adventure of a life time.

It was almost a normal day. Just two doctors in training walking to work when something strange appears and their day changes. They have a decision to make that could affect their life forever.

An adventure of a life time.

What they thought about the book:

The Doctor said, 'It was interesting, but it could use a TARDIS.'

The New York times said, 'Most read book in New York.'
