One day Jack was heading into town to buy some farm equipment and some goodies. Jack was listening to the radio and it was about a man and his dog. Jack thought of his dog Basel. He looked in the back of the ute and Basel wasn't there at all. As Jack was stopping the ute, he was panicking and his heart was beating like the sound of drums. Jack got out of the ute and started calling Basel. He wasn't barking or yelping.

Jack turned the ute around and started heading home. He stopped at the front of the drive way. Jack looked down the red dirt driveway and yelled for Basel.

There was no sign of Basel, Jack started up the ute and drove straight down the driveway and stopped at the little cottage where he lived. Jack got out.

He yelled, “Basel.”

Basel barked, it sounded like it was coming from around of the back of the house. Jack started running around to the back of the house. Basel was barking his head off; Jack unclipped the chain that he was clipped on to.

Basel jumped up on to Jack.

Jack said, “Come on boy. Let’s go to town.”

Jack and Basel got in the ute and started driving back to town. Two hours later, Jack and Basel return back home. They drove straight past the house and all the way down to the river. Basel started barking because he knew where they were going.

Jack and Basel reached the river. Jack steered his ute to the right. He started reversing and turning to the left. Jack was just a metre away from the river. They jumped out and started running towards the back of the ute. They jumped just before the back tailgate and jumped right off the ute completely into the river.

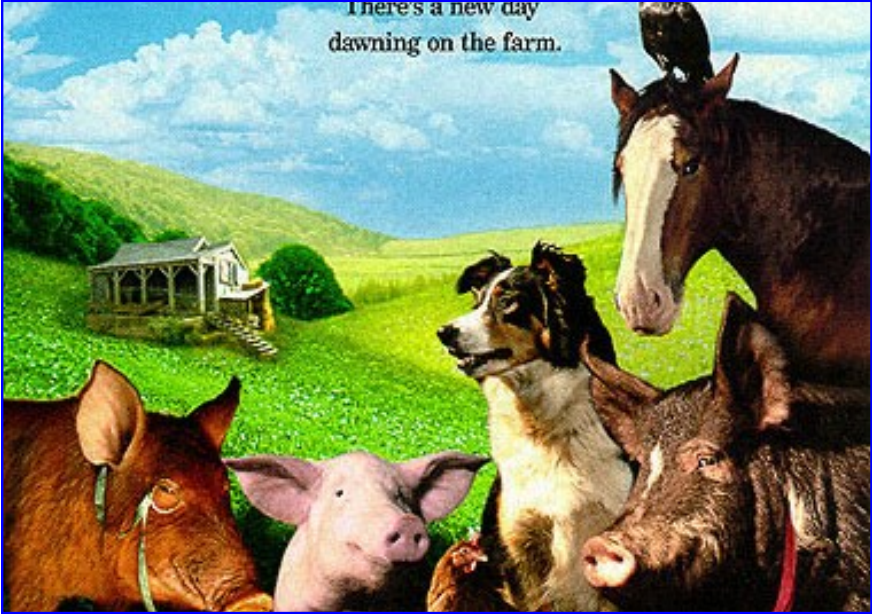

SPLASH!!!!!! The water from Jack and Basel exploded as they hit the bottom of the river. They both sprung back up to the top of the water and started SPLASHING each other.

After that, they went inside away from the cold. Jack said to himself, “I will never forget the bond Basel and I share”.

That night, Jack and Basel watched some farm movies. Basel fell asleep, followed shortly by Basel.

There's a new day
dawning on the farm.

They both dreamt of wonderful things.

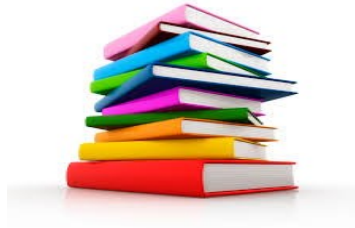

Get ready for the incredible adventure that Jack and his dog, Basel, go on. This is no ordinary dog- you will share moments of happiness and sadness, but above all you will enjoy going on an adventure with these two characters.
